

You have to believe what you can believe. There's not much I can know for certain, but I do know for certain that these are genuine certified copies and I would swear on a stack of Bibles to that fact. It's up to you whether you believe me or not, but I do have in my possession 3 documents which show that the Nebraska seal used on a Certificate of Fetal Death in 1993 was different than the seal used on a Certificate of Live Birth in 2011.

Ultimately the only way we're ever going to know whether the HDOH has been fudging their certification all along, whether they have deliberately put out disinformation, or whether the people who came forward with certified copies put out disinformation is by looking at the computerized transaction logs, original paper records, and microfilm rolls from several years. I do know that the certificates I have are genuine. I understand that you have no way of knowing whether I am telling the truth or not so I can't hold it against you if you disbelieve me. I have no way of knowing whether anybody else's is genuine either so I know what it's like to be in that boat.

Got up this morning, got the kids ready for church, took some photos of my daughter's birth certificate and the documentation that it was received from the NE Dept of Health. I can zoom in on the seal later. For right now I just want to document the timeframe in which I did all this:

I took some other pics too but these should be clear enough and I'm not going to take the time to add the others.

I went to church, where I played the organ. Skipped Bible class to come home and get this posted, because Miss Tickly rejected Danae's documentation of having received her birth certificate from the HDOH because she said the time delay gave enough time for Danae to forge the envelopes too. OK, I forgot to take a pic of the envelope so I'll do this now. I'm just telling you how this went down so if anybody looks at time stamps if there are any they'll know why it's how it is. Here's the photo of the envelope.

Church started at 9AM, I played the organ, got home about 10:25 and took a pic of the bulletin:

Preparing for Receiving the Lord's Supper

We believe that Communion carries with it pastoral, personal, and congregational responsibilities as well as privileges. We follow the instructions of St. Paul in 1 Corinthians 11:27-29 where we read, "Whoever, therefore, eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner will be guilty

I've been typing this up since and will now save and post this on the blog so it can be seen that I did not have time to forge all this stuff.
